

In today's Uzbekistan, men are asking for trouble if they don't shave. To have a beard is to invite unwelcome intrusion not just into your affairs, but those of your family and friends.

The U.S. ambassador to Uzbekistan has spoken out against a reported spate of police officers forcibly shaving young Muslim men. Speaking at a conference in Tashkent this week, Daniel ...

In Central Asia, authorities often interpret a young man's decision to grow a beard as an outward sign of Islamic piety. An Olympic champion, a popular singer, and a Western tourist in ...

Rapid industrialization and evolving energy policies in Uzbekistan require sustainable solutions to manage electricity demand, especially during peak periods.

From March onwards, Muslim men across Uzbekistan wearing long beards have been arrested, had their beards forcibly shaved, and fined. Muslims who wish to remain anonymous for fear of state...

Some men who were detained by police at the Malika market in Tashkent on August 23 have complained that they were forced to shave off their beards after being brought to the police station.

The authorities in Uzbekistan have reportedly embarked on a fresh wave of harassment against men wearing beards, sparking concerns about a worsening climate for religious freedoms.

TASHKENT (TCA) -- Security officials in Uzbekistan have come under fire after allegedly detaining dozens of males at a local market in Tashkent and shaving their beards before releasing ...

Police in Uzbekistan have been forcing dozens of practising Muslim men to shave their beards according to a report today by RFE/RL.

Judging from the above, shaving a person's beard, shaving it or taking it for investigation - all this is contrary to public legal principles, international law, human rights and the Constitution of the ...

Web: <https://www.rrrprojects.co.za>