

Panasonic Holdings Corp. is considering selling or scaling back its struggling television business and other less profitable divisions, a top Panasonic official announced on Feb. 4.

The potential move would be part of a group restructuring at Panasonic Holdings, intended to enable faster decision-making and focus on growth.

This is reportedly part of a larger strategy where Panasonic will be reorganized into three separate companies, one of which will be called "Smart Life". It released one Mini LED LCD and two ...

As companies such as Apple, Samsung and Huawei came to dominate consumer electronics, Panasonic made two major reinvention bets that have faced challenges: an EV battery ...

Panasonic was once the biggest name in televisions, but then it abruptly left the US market. Why did the giant leave the states, and what brought it back?

According to a report in Nikkei (via FlatpanelsHD), the Japanese electronics manufacturer is considering a sale of its TV business, after company president Yuki Kusumi declared on an online...

Could Panasonic ever regain its former dominance in the electronics industry? It is unlikely that Panasonic will regain its former level of dominance in the electronics industry, given the intense ...

Panasonic has made the shocking revelation that it's considering selling or scaling back its TV business, in an announcement that's likely to be hugely disappointing to the company's loyal fans.

In February 2025, Panasonic Electric announced its dissolution and abandonment of the TV business. This news not only signals the end of Panasonic TV but also symbolizes the further contraction of ...

In conclusion, Panasonic's exit from the US TV market was due to a combination of factors, including increased competition, advances in technology, and changes in the market demand.

Web: <https://www.rrrprojects.co.za>